Quality scholarship with global influence

Our legacy

For the past 21 years, Policy Press has published cutting-edge, award-winning books and journals in the social sciences. Much has changed in that time, and the formation of Bristol University Press reflects our aim to support the changing needs of the international scholarly community and to address today's societal global grand challenges.

Our commitment

With the launch of Bristol University Press we expand into new subject areas and will continue to put our authors and readers at the heart of what we do. With our reputation for high quality, not-for-profit, peer-reviewed publishing we are committed to disseminating world-class scholarship that advances theory, knowledge and learning.

Our publishing focus

Bristol University Press will focus on publishing in business and management, economics, environment and sustainability, human geography, international relations, international development, law and human rights, politics, sociology and social theory. The Policy Press imprint will continue to publish impactful work that reaches beyond scholarly audiences maintaining its commitment to progressive social change. We are open to new ideas and approaches, emerging areas of research and interdisciplinary work that extends traditional scholarly boundaries and welcome submissions to our publishing teams.

<http://bristoluniversitypress.co.uk/bup-authors>

"Bristol University Press combines a tradition of publishing high-quality research with a bold new strategy, entrepreneurial management and strong author engagement. I look forward to seeing it established as a top-rate academic publisher."

Jon Pierre, Professor of Political Science, University of Gothenburg and University of Melbourne

BRISTOL
UNIVERSITY PRESS

"University presses are a crucial part of our intellectual, social and cultural landscape. It is a privilege to play a larger role in it than ever before."
Alison Shaw, Chief Executive, Policy Press and Bristol University Press

"We are delighted to invest in the future of the press and to expand its remit to encompass a broader range of scholarship of the highest quality."
Professor Hugh Brady, Vice-Chancellor and President of the University of Bristol

The inequality crisis

The facts and what we can do about it

Roger Brown

Foreword Kate Pickett

“An authoritative and up-to-date account of the drivers of economic inequality in the UK.”

Danny Dorling, University of Oxford

“Indispensable. All you need to know about the inequality crisis – causes, consequences and controversies – in one place.”

Stewart Lansley, author of A Sharing Economy and Breadline Britain

“A short, necessary and powerful book ... Roger Brown calls for the language and means for the virtuous reduction of harms.”

John Holmwood, University of Nottingham

“Its compelling and authoritative account will reinvigorate debates on inequality and how it might be tackled. Essential reading.”

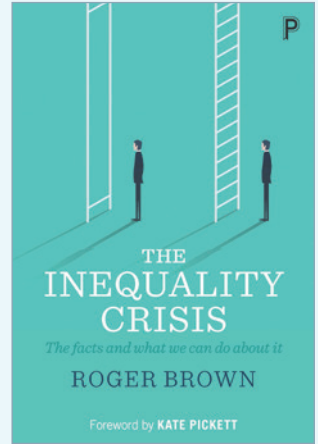

Diane Reay, University of Cambridge

“Roger Brown ... wants action and advances policy recommendations that deserve to be chewed over, right, left and centre.”

David Walker, The Guardian

What are the causes of the rise in economic inequality in the West and what can be done about it? This book provides a comprehensive survey of all the available evidence, looking at both sides of the inequality argument. Fully up-to-date with the 2017 election, Brexit and Donald Trump, this accessible and jargon-free introduction is international in scope and packed with fascinating facts and quotes.

Contents Foreword Kate Pickett; Preface; Introduction; Inequality: for and against; The causes of inequality: market theories; The causes of inequality: institutional theories; Responses to rising inequality: taxes and transfers; Responses to rising inequality; Looking ahead.

“Not so much a book, more a call to arms. Clearly written and rationally argued. Read it and ACT before any more women’s lives are ruined.”

Tony Garnett, author of The Day the Music Died

“An excellent weapon in the wars its title refers to. It will be especially useful here in Ireland where the struggle for a woman’s right to choose is now a central political issue, North and South.”

Brid Smith, People Before Profit, TD Dublin

Broken benefits

What's gone wrong with welfare reform

Sam Royston, The Children's Society

"Expert, accessible exposure of social security provision in the UK – its past, its cuts, its future plans. It strongly calls for Better Benefits."

Terry Patterson, National Association of Welfare Rights Advisers

"Invaluable: a superb analysis of why much recent welfare reform has gone wrong and what needs to be done to get the system right."

Patrick Butler, The Guardian

"A highly engaging and accessible account of the challenges within our social security system and a powerful manifesto for change. This authoritative guide to the facts behind the headlines is needed now more than ever."

Baroness Grey-Thompson of Eaglescliffe

Britain is going through the most radical upheaval of the benefits system since the 1940s. Sam Royston argues that social security isn't working, and without a change in direction, it will be even less fair in the future. This much-needed book provides an introductory guide to social security, correcting misunderstandings and exposing poorly understood problems, and includes real-life stories, models of household budgets, projections of benefit spending, and a free online calculator showing the impact of welfare changes on personal finances. It presents practical ideas of how benefits should be reformed, to create a fairer, simpler and more coherent system for the future.

Contents Part I: Introducing the benefits system Part II: Mapping it all out: The mechanics of the benefits system; Part III: A thousand cuts; Part IV: Chaos, error and misjudgement: Payments and administration in the benefits system; Part V: The "New Settlement": Benefits in 2020; Part VI: Better benefits.

"A very good introduction to social security policy and also a swingeing critique of the thrust of policy since 2010."

Jonathan Bradshaw,
University of York

"An important book for all those making decisions about the benefits system and those hoping to influence those decisions."

Naomi Eisenstadt,
University of Oxford

Abortion wars

The fight for reproductive rights

Judith Orr

“As a dedicated pro-choice activist Judith is best placed to write this informative and well-pitched analysis of [the] issues.”

Kerry Abel, Chair of Abortion Rights the UK national pro-choice campaign

“This excellent book shows why working class women have always had most to gain from campaigns for free, legal and safe abortion. I recommend it to activists everywhere.”

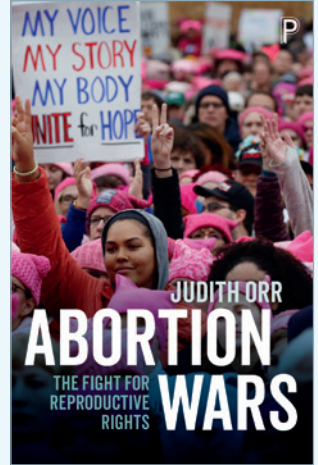

Jane Loftus, Communication Workers Union

“Highly readable and informative, this is essential and timely reading for anyone who cares about women’s reproductive rights. A political tour de force.”

Lucy Bland, Anglia Ruskin University

2017 marks the 50th anniversary of Britain’s 1967 Abortion Act. Combining analysis of media coverage, statistics, popular culture and social attitudes with powerful first-hand accounts of women’s experiences, Judith Orr measures the Act’s impact showing that full reproductive rights are yet to be won. The book highlights current debates over decriminalisation and argues for abortion provision fit for the 21st century.

Contents A choice moment; A web of solidarity; Abortion: as old as humanity; An Act of liberation?; Opposition and resistance; Women’s bodies as battlegrounds; What we need; Voices from the frontline; Get involved.

The moral marketplace

How mission-driven millennials and social entrepreneurs are changing our world

Asheem Singh

“Puts the hype around social entrepreneurship into a wider political and ethical context, providing a hopeful vision for turning enthusiasm into positive social action.”

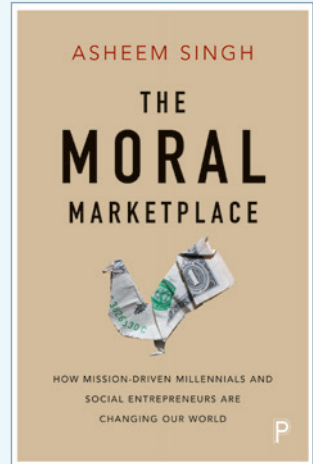

David Floyd, Social Spider

“A remarkable book in dangerous times. Asheem Singh shows with brio, verve and wit, how civic and social activism is retaking its rightful place at the heart of all that is good about our world.”

Phillip Blond, Republica

Author and activist Asheem Singh explores how a movement of tiny ventures evolved into a global humanitarian and financial juggernaut, revealing new ways to fight privilege and inequality, rewire philanthropy, government and even capitalism itself. Through our giving, campaigning and even through our choices as consumers, we can all play a crucial role in taking on the biggest social challenges of our time.

Contents Introduction: Behold, the social entrepreneur!; The man who invented a chicken: introducing a global generation of entrepreneurial social activists; Raising the voices of girl-children: pyramids, incubators and the the fight for equality; The incredible rise of co-operatives: conscious consumption ... slow fashion ... ethical exploration ... and more ...; How do you know you are making a difference? The metrics and measures that keep social enterprise on-mission; A trip to the favela: The death and life of traditional charity; Inside the social enterprise city: how change happens, locally and globally; The bull market of the greater good: fact, fiction and the rise of big-money activism; The digital device in the wall: #peoplepower meets the block-chain; Reclaiming the heart of government: ideas for inspiring power in the age of the moral marketplace; Conclusion: creating a new kind of capitalism.

“The rallying cry for the socially conscious, business-savvy radical who knows that it’s not enough to make a difference: today you can be the difference.”

Doug Miller, Asian Venture Philanthropy Network Chairman

“Whirls the reader around the world and through history, telling stories which show a way forward that really will change things.”

Kate Welch OBE DL, Chief Executive, Social Enterprise Acumen CIC

What kind of democracy is this?

Politics in a changing world

Matthew Flinders, University of Sheffield

“An extremely unusual, accessible and innovative way of getting across crucial messages about how democracy affects a whole range of aspects of our lives.”

Rt. Hon, the Prof Lord Blunkett

“A skilfully crafted succession of humorous, scholarly and thought provoking insights into contemporary democratic politics and more ... should most definitely be on the coffee tables of all serious politicians.” Rosie Campbell, Birkbeck University

Has there ever been a period in modern history when democratic politics seemed more unpredictable or unruly? Matthew Flinders ranges expertly across architecture, art, fell running and fairy tales in an attempt to understand the emerging democratic landscape. Linking academic scholarship with popular culture, this refreshing and stimulating book seeks to provoke and inform in equal measure.

Why the left loses

The decline of the centre-left in comparative perspective

Edited by Rob Manwaring, Flinders University and Paul Kennedy, University of Bath

“This lucid and timely collection deserves to be read by all those with a scholarly or political interest in the fate of social democracy.” Patrick Diamond, Queen Mary University of London

Social Democracy is on the back-foot, and increasingly centre-left political parties are struggling to win office. Why the left loses offers an international, comparative view of the changing political landscape, examining whether the centre-left project is exhausted and able to renew its message in a neo-liberal age.

Obama's welfare legacy

An assessment of US anti-poverty policies

Anne Daguerre, University of Middlesex

"An insightful analysis of the successes and failures of the Obama administration's efforts to reduce poverty and inequality in the United States." Alex Waddan, University of Leicester

Using new research, Anne Daguerre examines Obama's legacy on welfare and antipoverty policies and provides an up-to-date account of the contemporary politics of poverty and public entitlements in the US, comparing this with Western European examples to assess what lessons can be learned.

American Tianxia

Chinese money, American power and the end of history

Salvatore Babones, The University of Sydney

"This is a book that everyone interested in the future of world politics cannot afford to ignore. Read American Tianxia before adjusting your prejudices." David Goodman, Xi'an Jiaotong-Liverpool University

Salvatore Babones provides an up-to-date assessment of China's economic problems and how they are undermining China's challenge to the Western-dominated world order. He shows how liberal individualism has become the leitmotif of the American Tianxia, an emerging world-system in which all people seek a share in the American economic, cultural, and political system.

Hungry Britain

The rise of food charity

Hannah Lambie-Mumford, University of Sheffield

“Ethical, critical, and constructive, it is essential reading.”

Graham Riches, University of British Columbia

This book explores the prolific rise of food charity over the last 15 years and its implications for overcoming food insecurity. It argues that effective, policy-driven solutions require a rights-based framework, which enables a range of actors to work together.

Inclusive growth in cities

From ideas to action

Josh Stott

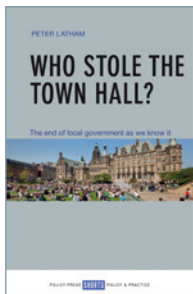

Inclusive growth is rising up the agenda of urban thinkers and policy makers. However, there is confusion around how cities might achieve it. Josh Stott analyses the characteristics of a more inclusive local economy and puts forward a strategy for achieving more inclusive growth based around new ideas and international good practice.

Who stole the town hall?

The end of local government as we know it

Peter Latham, Sociologist

“Latham’s passion for democracy and social justice shines through in his detailed critique.”

Kevan Nelson, North West Regional Secretary, UNISON

Latham argues that the UK Government’s devolution agenda conceals their real intention of completing the privatisation of local government and other public services. He concludes that a new basis for democracy is vital to fund increased provision of services.

Why Detroit matters

Decline, renewal and hope in a divided city

Edited by Brian Doucet, Erasmus University, Rotterdam

“An important and unique book ... provides perspectives which help the reader to understand, and wider lessons for creating more inclusive cities.” John McCarthy,
Heriot Watt University, UK

This book examines why what happens in Detroit matters for other cities around the world. Leading scholars on Detroit are joined by the city’s most influential writers, planners, artists and activists who have all drawn on their rich visions, ideas and practices.

Rethinking poverty

What makes a good society?

Barry Knight, Webb Memorial Trust

“Highlights the urgent need for a new approach to dismantling poverty – I urge you to read it!”
Lord Bird MBE

Based on extensive research with leading organisations, academics, community activists and families living in poverty, this book calls for a forward-looking social policy that addresses continuing austerity, under-resourced organisations and a lack of social solidarity by increasing people’s sense of agency in building the society that they want.

Racism, policy and politics

Karim Murji, University of West London

“A sharp and original contribution to the analysis of contemporary debates about racism, policing and public policy.” John Solomos, University of Warwick

This book provides a unique insight into the relationship between race and ethnicity scholarship and the reality of ‘real world’ policy and politics. It examines the changing context for researching race and racism, including media and policy debates, and how institutional racism plays out in public policy settings.

Poverty and social exclusion in the UK, Volume 1

The nature and extent of the problem

Edited by Esther Dermott, University of Bristol and Gill Main, University of Leeds

“Comprehensive, shocking and revealing. How the UK declined and poverty rose as economic inequality spread across the land.” Danny Dorling, University of Oxford

This important book reports on the nature of poverty for different social groups: older and younger people; parents and children; ethnic groups; men and women; disabled people; and across regions through the recent period of austerity. It reflects on the impact of government policies and future developments.

Like mother, like daughter?

How career women influence their daughters' ambition

Jill Armstrong, University of Cambridge

"A fascinating study on change and continuity in intergenerational gender relations. This is a must read!"

Elisabeth Kelan, Cranfield University

This book shows that having a mother as a role model, even for graduates of top universities, does not predict daughters progressing in their own careers. Based on a large, cross-generational qualitative sample, it offers a timely and original perspective on the debate about gender equality in leadership positions.

Miseducation

Inequality, education and the working classes

Diane Reay, University of Cambridge and LSE

“Incredibly insightful and passionate ... Diane Reay really does get class. Mandatory reading for anyone proclaiming greater equity in education.”

John Smyth, University of Huddersfield

“Passionate, provocative and deeply troubling, this book examines contemporary working-class education ... should be required reading for politicians of both the left and especially the right.”

Tim Strangleman, University of Kent

“A trenchant portrayal of class processes ... a must read for all those interested in educational opportunities, the global economy.”

Lois Weis, State University of New York

In this book Diane Reay, herself working class turned Cambridge professor, addresses the urgent question of why the working classes are still faring so much worse than the upper and middle classes in education, and vitally – what we can do to achieve a fairer system.

Contents: Introduction; Why can't education compensate for society?;

The recent history of class in education; Class in the classroom; Social Mobility;

The middle and upper classes: Getting the 'best' for your own child; Class feeling: A problematic solution: Troubling the soul and preying on the psyche;

Conclusion; Epilogue: Thinking through class.

Changing communities

Stories of migration, displacement and solidarities

Marjorie Mayo, Goldsmiths College, University of London

“An important resource for policy makers, practitioners and activists [which includes] the voices of displaced people themselves.” Mae Shaw, University of Edinburgh

This book brings understandings of migration and displacement together with creative, cultural ways in which communities respond to their experiences of change through art forms, exploring the scope for building communities of solidarity and social justice. The concluding chapters identify potential implications for policy and professional practice to promote communities of solidarity.

and Nicola Horsley, Loughborough University

“A compelling critique of contemporary developments in early intervention.” Brigid Featherstone,
University of Huddersfield

A vital interrogation of the internationally accepted policy and practice consensus that intervention to shape parenting in the early years is the way to prevent disadvantage. It shows how early intervention policies underpinned by interpretations of brain science perpetuate gendered, classed and raced inequalities.

The education debate

Stephen J. Ball, Institute of Education,
University of London

“My students need a book that introduces them to policy analysis in a rigorous yet accessible manner; this is it.”

Meg Maguire, King’s College London

“Policy researchers are deeply indebted to Ball’s detailed analysis that underpins the sociological contribution in this book.”

Helen Gunter, University of Manchester

“Stephen Ball is one of the few academics who can embrace policy, research and learning with a fierce and illuminating critical spirit.”

Richard Andrews, University of East Anglia

“This must-read book is forensic in its analysis and points to the imperative for new thinking on education.”

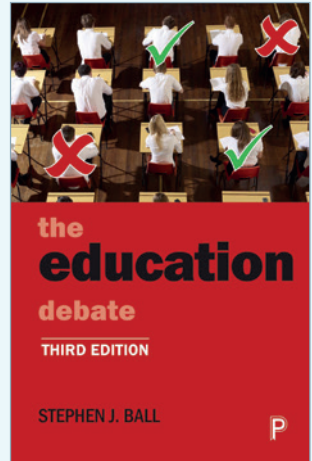

Hugh Lauder, University of Bath

“This invaluable new edition of this powerful and provocative book offers fresh insights into political context and policy narratives.”

Phillip Brown, Cardiff University

Ever-changing, stuttering policy can make the education debate hard to keep track of ... a problem that this book solves. Along with extensive updates, this third edition includes a new introduction and updated examples and references throughout. Ball examines new areas of focus, including the emphasis on neuroscience, the increased interest of business in education and the impact of austerity and precarity.

Contents Introduction: The great education debate (1976–2016); Key concepts: education policy, economic necessity and education reform; Class, comprehensives and continuities: a short history of English education policy; Policy technologies and the UK government’s approach to public service reform; Policy, inequity and advantage; A sociology of education policy: past, present and future.

Health divides

Where you live can kill you

Clare Bamba, Newcastle University

With a Foreword by Danny Dorling

“Highly commended at the BMA Book Awards 2017. A major, readable new statement that captures crucial insights from a new wave of political epidemiology. Health Divides will change the way you think about health and illness.”

Professor Jason Beckfield,
Harvard University, USA

“Brilliantly demonstrates how increasing geographical and social health inequities stem from policy decisions and how different political choices could reduce them.”

Professor Louise Potvin, University of Montreal, Canada

“A highly accessible text that provides a forensic investigation into how and why geography matters for health and inequalities ... Profoundly important.”

Professor Jamie Pearce, University of Edinburgh, Scotland and Co-Editor, Health and Place

“Bamba’s razor sharp, timely and comprehensive analysis should be read by anyone concerned about inequality.”

Mary O’Hara, Guardian Journalist and author

Clare Bamba, a leading expert in public health, draws on case studies from across the globe to examine the social, environmental, economic and political causes of health inequalities, how they have evolved over time and what they are like today. Revealing gaps in life expectancy of up to 25 years between places just a few miles apart, this important and accessible book demonstrates that where you live can kill you.

What death means now

Thinking critically about dying and grieving

Tony Walter, University of Bath

“Tony Walter’s intelligent and fascinating analysis of dying, disposal and our continuing relationship with the dead will make us all think again.” Colin Murray Parkes, President of Cruse Bereavement Care

“An essential read ... accessible, informative and critical, this pithy book challenges scholars and general readers alike to interrogate popular ideas about contemporary death and dying.” Julie Ellis, University of Sheffield

“In this new work, Walter’s encyclopaedic and critical gaze has produced another volume of analysis to be reckoned with.” Allan Kellehear, University of Bradford

Dying and grieving continually evolve: new preparations for dying, new kinds of funerals, new ways of handling grief and new ways to memorialise are developing all the time. Bringing 25 years of research and teaching in the sociology of death and dying to this important book, Tony Walter engages critically with key questions around this universal fact.

The Rise of the Right

English nationalism and the transformation of working-class politics

Simon Winlow and Steve Hall, Teeside University and James Treadwell, Staffordshire University

“An unapologetically bleak account of contemporary Britain, cutting angrily and incisively through the thickets of liberal dogma. Essential reading.” Mark Carrigan, Digital Sociologist

“This brilliant book shows why the downfall of the left is a post-GFC and post-Brexit condition which, without action, could become permanent.” Steve Redhead, Flinders University, Adelaide, South Australia

This book challenges thinking about working-class politics and the rise of right-wing nationalism in the de-industrialised and decaying towns and cities of England. The rise of the right among the working class, as shown in the shock Brexit result, the authors claim, is inextricably connected to the withdrawal of the political left from traditional working-class communities. The left’s refusal to advance the economic interests of those who have suffered most from neoliberal economic restructuring.

Young people, welfare and crime

Governing non-participation

Ross Fergusson, The Open University

“Scholarly and readable. Its interdisciplinary analysis is utterly compelling and masterful. The implications are profoundly unsettling ...” British Journal of Criminology

Widespread youth unemployment is rapidly becoming a major problem around the world. Ross Fergusson mounts a powerful critique of current approaches, re-examining its causes and consequences from a wide range of perspectives. This is essential for anyone working with or trying to address the problems of youth today.

The Journal of Public Finance and Public Choice (JPFPC), founded in 1983 by Professor Domenico da Empoli and relaunched in 2018 in partnership with Bristol University Press and an outstanding, international editorial board, will be revitalised in print and online while maintaining its commitment to publishing high quality, peer-reviewed research.

Unique in public economics journals, JPFPC is committed to an inclusive approach of advancing knowledge in both public finance and public choice. It welcomes submissions from economics, as well as from geography, law, political science and sociology, that contribute to our understanding of the public economy and its broader constitutional, legal and political economy matrix.

JPFPC invites original, topical, policy relevant and innovative contributions. It welcomes empirical or theoretical submissions, including papers on the history of economic thought and economic methodology. JPFPC moreover welcomes behavioral and multidisciplinary approaches.

European Journal of Politics and Gender

Editors: Petra Ahrens, University of Antwerp, Belgium, Karen Celis, Vrije Universiteit Brussel, Belgium, Sarah Childs, University of Bristol, UK, Isabelle Engeli, University of Bath, UK, Elizabeth Evans, Goldsmiths University of London, UK, Liza Mügge, University of Amsterdam, The Netherlands

The European Journal of Politics and Gender (EJPG) is a peer-reviewed journal that publishes international, cutting-edge research in the broad field of politics and gender. EJPG is the flagship journal of the European Conference on Politics and Gender (ECPG).

EJPG is firmly embedded in global politics and gender scholarship, its scope is not limited to Europe. EJPG aims to advance gender and politics research in all its diversity.

EJPG understands gender as a political phenomenon that shapes power relations. Gender is contextual and is influenced by the intersection of multiple social categories and identities. The processes produce patterns of political inclusion and exclusion that are sometimes immediately visible, but often also hidden. EJPG therefore studies formal and informal components of politics in local, national, transnational and global realms. Subfields encompass, but are not limited to: social movements; representation; political participation; governance; public policy; the European Union; political economy; conflict and development; citizenship; LGBTQI politics; sexuality; and international relations.
