

POLICY & POLITICS ANNUAL LECTURES

The Policy & Politics Annual Lecture was established in 1996 to enhance further the international profile of the journal. This was achieved by inviting eminent speakers to address broad-ranging themes such as 'Globalisation and foreign policy' (Dame Pauline Neville-Jones, 1999), 'The UN and peace: does it help?' (Sir Marrack Goulding, 2000) and 'Western intelligence, Osama bin Laden and international terrorism' (Professor Christopher Andrew, 2002). As a public lecture offered by the University of Bristol, a separate objective was to provide an opportunity for the citizens of Bristol to hear experts reflect on topics of major contemporary significance. Over the years, the audience has included politicians and senior officers from the City Council (including the Lord Mayor), representatives from the business community and the voluntary sector, and groups of young people from secondary schools and sixth form colleges. The Annual Lecture has thus played a part in the University's widening participation strategy. The Management Board of the journal is committed to continuing what has now become a Bristol University tradition.

1996 The Honourable Neal Blewett Australia and the Pacific century
1997 Sir Alistair Hunter Reflections on international trade and investment in the global economy
1998 Professor Archie Brown Political leadership and policy transformation
1999 Dame Pauline Neville-Jones Globalisation and foreign policy
2000 Lord Williamson Europe Rules – OK?
2001 Sir Marrack Goulding The UN and peace: does it help?
2002 Professor Christopher Andrew Western intelligence, Osama bin Laden and international terrorism
2003 Ms Frances Cairncross The coming century: trends and bends
2004 Professor Francesca Klug Human rights: above politics or a creature of politics?
2005 Dr Geoff Mulgan How ideas become reality: reflections on what governments can (and can't) do to achieve change
2006 Sir Stephen Wall Does the European Union have anywhere to go after referendums
2007 Rt Hon Nick Raynsford MP Policy development in a 24/7 media environment
2008 Lord Jay of Ewelme Who Makes UK Foreign Policy?
2009 Jonathan Evans, Director General of the Security Service, Defending the Realm